Letter from the President & CEO

A revolution is happening.

The revolution is in genetics. Unlocking the secrets in genetics allows us to better answer the question of what causes disease.

At PNRI, we take that question to the next level. How does our genetics keep us healthy in the face of the risks that we face every day?

By asking different questions, we are finding new solutions — nature’s solutions to preventing disease.

This is a bold vision. And, we are taking bold action to pursue it. We are adding new scientists to our team — visionary researchers who are excited to ask the questions that others are not and driven to develop creative ways to unravel nature’s complexity.

PNRI was founded over 60 years ago on a belief that experienced and creative scientists seeking answers to some of the most difficult medical questions is the key to finding breakthroughs in human health. We are excited to carry on that tradition in our work today.

We are honored to have the support of generous donors from across the community who believe in our vision.

Thank you for being a part of PNRI.

Best wishes,
John Wecker, PhD, President & CEO

Donor Spotlight

“I want to be part of an answer.”
— Mary Jane Jones, Legacy Donor

Mary Jane Jones passed away in 2018, leaving PNRI a bequest of nearly $100,000 – a lasting legacy of a woman who believed in the possibilities of basic research.

Mary Jane’s relationship with PNRI started at the very beginning. She and her husband Al were childhood friends of founder Bill Hutchinson. When “Dr. Bill,” as they called him, was starting PNRI, she and Al supported his vision and helped raise money for the new institute.

Mary Jane continued to support PNRI with small donations even after “Dr. Bill” and her husband died, and she arranged for a gift that could have a larger impact when she was gone.

“When my legacy gift is received, I know my money will be used for something important – maybe to bring a discovery to fruition. That makes me happy because I want to be part of an answer.”

Her generous and visionary support fuels important discoveries in the fight against human disease for years to come.
At PNRI, our team of forward-looking scientists is uncovering how the human body holds solutions to preventing disease and discovering new ways for improving human health.

Rick McLaughlin, PhD
"Understanding how evolution designed the amazing diversity of form and function in nature drives my passion for genetic research."

Michael Metzger, PhD
"PNRI is a research organization that encourages scientists to ask unconventional questions. It is a privilege to have the freedom to follow your scientific curiosity."

Bill Hagopian, MD, PhD
"Taking care of patients with Type 1 diabetes highlights the urgent need to stop this disease, guides what research is needed, and points to how to apply that research to predict and prevent it from developing in future patients."

Aimée Dudley, PhD
“One of my favorite parts about being a scientist is getting to be the first one to discover answers to questions that have eluded scientists for years.”

David Galas, PhD
“I believe finding new mathematical methods to analyze ever more complex biological and genetic data has the power to transform how we prevent, treat, and cure disease.”

Joe Nadeau, PhD
“Our research is focused on understanding how genetics can prevent disease in the first place. This knowledge could revolutionize how scientists approach human health and disease.”
With gratitude to the generous donors who support our visionary research. Gifts made from October 1, 2017 to September 30, 2018.
